Historic St Davids
Short Walk

Beginning and ending at Oriel y Parc Gallery and Visitor Centre, this 1.3-mile walk takes in one of the most breathtaking views in the National Park.

After walking through the centre of this little city, the view you get from the cathedral gate is stunning, with the cathedral itself tucked into the valley below and, to the west, the outline of St Davids Head and Carn Llidi.

Most cathedrals dominate their setting, but St Davids was built in a valley on the site of David’s Christian community.

St Davids is a fascinating place with some 200 listed buildings, including the cathedral and its Bishop’s Palace. In the past it was called a city because it had a cathedral, but locals have only been able to officially call their community a city since 1995.

This route takes you along Cathedral Close, where you may see cattle and sheep grazing to help conserve this ancient landscape.

The National Park Authority is the planning authority for Pembrokeshire and as such it works hard to conserve the special character of the area. On this St Davids walk you’ll pass several examples of old buildings which have been sympathetically restored, as well as new ones built in the local vernacular style.

Keep an eye out for the old school building which was converted to a pilgrimage centre, a playful newly built ‘hobbit’ style house and a listed Art Deco-style circular house.

David established his community alongside the River Alun in the 6th century. It grew in importance after his death and for centuries pilgrims travelled to pay homage at his shrine. David was canonised in 1120 when it was decreed that two pilgrimages to the saint’s shrine equalled one pilgrimage to Rome.
